

Frontier Culture Museum Scavenger Hunt

Can you find all these things
as you visit the Museum?

West Africa

This Ikenga is one of the most important symbols of the Igbo people. How is it significant to them?

The name of this tool is _____. How do these West African farmers use it?

This item is commonly found in an Igbo compound. What do you think it is used for?

England

Hint: Look where the smoke comes out of the house. Why does this plaque have “EW” and “1692” on it?

Yum, something smells really good! What is this “hole in the wall” for?

How is this machine used and which room is it in?

Where do you see this “charger”? Who are the two people pictured on it?

Ireland

Bang, bang, bang! The sound of a hammer is close by! Who is making that noise? What does he make using this hammer?

A hot bed of coals is needed so this man can do his work. How does this help with that? What is this thing called?

This is used to change the fibers of the flax plant into something else. What is the name of this machine? What happens to the flax fibers?

This building has holes in the wall! What are they for? How are they useful to the Irish family?

Germany

What funny looking chickens! What two breeds of chickens are they?

It can be pretty cold in Germany. What is this big white structure in the stube? How does it help keep people warm?

These are quite common in German villages of the 1700s. What is it and how does it benefit the people of the village?

This musical instrument looks like a mountain dulcimer, but it's not really. What is it called? How does it relate to the mountain dulcimer?

1740s America

This device is called a “break”. How does a settler use it to help build his cabin?

This is a kitchen for this settler family. How is it different from your kitchen? How would a settler roast a joint of meat here?

1820s America

These two things are very useful when making a new axe handle. What are their names and how are they used?

Breakfast time is made easier with this tool. Where in the house do you find it? What does the family do with it?

Schoolhouse

Schoolhouse

Clang, clang, clang! Why is there a bell in the schoolhouse?

Humm . . . a cylinder shape thing made of tin. How would the schoolmaster use this?

1850s America

1850s America

You'll find this in the barn. What does it do?

Yes, this is a frying pan, but it is not like the one you have at home. What is different about it? What does the family in this house call it?

